The rehabilitation center is a forest reserve where orangutans, among other wild animals, are nurtured to readapt themselves to jungle life. The objective of the center is to teach animals living skills so that they can eventually be released back into the jungle. The center also conducts breeding programs for endangered species and those within the brink of extinction.

Phoca PDF