

This Hindu temple complex is set in a cavern on a limestone hill. Accessible only by climbing its 272 steps, the temple and Art Gallery are covered with colorful murals. During the Thaipusam festival each year, pilgrims flock here for thanksgiving, with some carrying needle-laden ‘kavadis' on their body as an act of penance and devotion.

Getting there: 8.07 miles north of Kuala Lumpur near Selayang. Buses and taxis are available; you may also take the Putra LRT and then a shuttle bus.*
